UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

The Tenor Afflicted by Troubles of Both Throat and Pocket.

A REFUSAL TO APPEAR AT THE LAST

The performance of Gounod's master work, "Faust," by the Boston Ideals at the Grand Opera House last night was exceptionally interesting. It interested an unusually large and choice Monday night house until after 11:30 o'clock. It had been made interesting in advance by being annonneed as Mile, de Lussan's first and only assumption of Margherita in Pittsburg this season and as the debut on our boards of a new star tenor, the Chevalier Edward Scovel.

The performance was opened by the announcement that this doughty knight of the high C's had so strained his throat on Satay evening in Cleveland that the indulgence of the audience must be craved on his behalf—and it was exceedingly interest-ing to watch the manful struggle between the tenor and his ticklish throat as the opera

Still more interesting was it at the beginning of the last act, with Margherita asleep on ber pallet of straw, Mephistopheles at the end of his lines and the conductor's baton noised in mid air-all waiting, waiting for THE TENOR THAT NEVER CAME.

It was interesting to hear the ensuing anouncement from the management, that Chevalier Scovel had been taken suddenly ill and seemed unable to finish the opera; but he would be able to go on, if at all, in a few minutes." After waiting awhile the third interesting announcement for this one evening was made, to the effect that Chevalier Scovel was still too ill to proceed, but that Mr. Baxter, who happened to be in the audience, would finish the role, though he had not time to don any more ap-propriate stage garment than Mephisto's big, red cloak. That made a very interesting

But the most interesting thing about this performance was not known to the audience at all. Mr. Scovel, who was interviewed after the curtain finally fell, obligingly showed his swollen and inflamed throat to the writer in proof that he had sung at all on this evening only with much pain and difficulty. But he just as obligingly went on to state that it was not for the sake of his throat, but of his pocket, that he declined to finish the opera. Manager Foster, he stated, had omitted

THE SLIGHT FORMALITY of paying his salary for a week or two past, and he had gone on the stage that night upon the express condition that a certain sum was to be paid him before the opera was over. As the house was a large one he thought Manager Foster ought not to walk off with a pocketful of money and leave him in the lurch, singing with much diffienlty and no pay.

"It is a shame!" exclaimed the gallant Chevalier. "There are those poor chorus girls weeks behind in their pay, crying in the corners, but afraid to stand up for their rights. I won't stand it, for my part. Even if I can get money from other sources, should I wish to, I carn my own living by my own work, and I propose to get what I

Manager Wilt, of the Grand, stated that he had that evening handed over to Colonel Foster a share of the receipts more than twice the amount that Mr. Scovel claims was to be paid him. Manager Foster had left the theater by this time, and his side of the story was not obtained.

Upon the general features of the "Faust" performance there is neither space nor need to say much. In most respects it was a duplicate of that given by the Ideals at their holiday engagement. The church scene was given this time, though not in a church interior as it should be Mr. Clark's Mephistopheles was the same weak-kneed, big-voiced individual, with very little fiendishness about him except his false intonation. Miss Claire mani fested decided improvement, both vocal and dramatic, in the role of Siebel. Mr. Mertens sang Valentine well. Mr. Ad. Liese-gang handled the orchestral and choral torces carefully and effectively.

M'lle de Lussan's Margherita had many points of high excellence. It was a natural and forceful impersonation, best in passionate and tragic moments, though in earlier scenes scarcely rising to the exquisitely innocent girlishness of Goethe's conception. Vocally her work was quite beyond reproach, altogether delightful. Chevalier Scovel, taking all circumstances into account, upheld the high repute he won in Italy and especially in his several seasons as one of Carl Rosa's leading tenors. His acting was easy and impassioned; he dressed and looked the young Faust to perfection.

the young Faust to perfection.

A frequent tendency to retard the movement was about the only vocal fault not entirely attributable to his indisposition. His enunciation was most satisfyingly clear (rare virtue in American sing ers!) his phrasing and style were eminently artistic, and the range and quality of tone be produced under such trying conditions did credit to the method of his venerable maestro, Lamperti, of Milan.

CRONIN IS STILL MISSING.

But the Bloody Hair Does Not Seem to Have Belonged to Him.

CHICAGO, May 6 .- The supposed bloody mystery attached to the disappearance of Dr. P. H. Cronin, who was a member of a great number of Irish societies, partly disappeared to-day. Hair supposed to be his and found in a bloody trunk on the prairies near Lakeview was taken this even-ing to the barber shop where Cronin frequented. The employes declared unbesitatingly that the bair was not Cronin's, that his was much coarser, not as long, and was inclined to be kinky Police Captain Schaack, who nas met Cronin frequently, expressed a similar opinion. The bloody cotton in the trunk, another supposed clue, proved valueless. It to-day turned out to be ordinary batting, and not the absorbent article such as the doctor carried in his surgeon's outfit. The people with whom Cronin boarded deny that he was a drinking man, claim that the hair found is really the doctor's, and persist in the theory that Cronin must have been murdered. Several well-known gentlemen, friends of Cronin, adopt the same view. Many people, however, are skeptical concerning the affair, and express the opinion that the doctor will turn up all right shortly.

An Ex-Confederate Says South Carollas Would Furnish Her Quota of Loyal Men in Case of War-How the

Fing Episode Occurred. PERSONAL TRUEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH ! CHARLESTON, S. C., May 6.—General Sherman's interview, published here yes-terday, in reference to the Stars and Stripes in the South Carolina regiment in the Centennial parade, has raised a storm of excited indignation, which is directed about evenly between General Sherman and the General who had command of the South Carolina troops. Sherman is not exactly a favorite in South Carolina. A prominent ex-Confederate who took part in the parade in New York said to THE DISPATER correspondent that he didn't care much about what Sherman said. He said: respondent that he didn't care much about what Sherman said. He said:

If Major McLean, of the Old Guard, or some other Union soldier had called our attention to it and kieked us for our stupid blunder I wouldn't have a word to say, but Sherman makes me sick. I don't think he likes South Carolina. If he will come down here we will put up a United States flag on the ruins of every house he burned on his journey through the State, and on every tree which his bummers used to hang niggers on to make them tell where the family had buried the household silver. The Old Guard, of New York, the Boston Lancers, the Boston Tigers and the First Connecticut Regiment, who have visited South Carolina since the war, can tell whether they saw any United States flags when they were down here.

The trouble is that the militia in this State is not properly organized. There's not a single regiment or battalion in the service that has a stand of regimental colors like the New York regiments. The company carries its own flag, the flag presented to them by their lady friends. That's how the South Carolina contingent came to parade without the national colors. The Brigadier who commanded them forgot all about regimental colors, or probably had never heard of such a thing. It was simply a blunder, that is all.

As for devotion to the flag of the country, der, that is all.

As for devotion to the flag of the country, you just let a war break out between the United States and anybody else and I think you'll find South Carolina will furnish three you'll find South Carolina will turnish three volunteers for every one furnished by Ohlo or New York, in proportion to her white population. They may forget to turn out with the national colors on a holiday parade, but you'll find no better defenders of the Stars and Stripes than that same brigade who did not have the national colors on their picnic.

How a Convict at Gibraltar Won His Freedom and Passage to America. PETECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCH.1 NEW YORK, May 6 .- "Gonzales has been released for acting executioner." This was the cable dispatch from Gibraltar about the ex-convict that arrived on the steamship India that puzzled the authorities at Washington the other day. They supposed there was an error in it, and that it meant that Gonzales had been released by the acting executive officer at Gibraltar. It was discovered to-day that the cable was literally correct. Gonzales, alias "Monkey," robbed a baker's shop in the town of Gibraltar, for which he was sentenced to ten years penal servitude. When he had served three years of his time the prison officials found them-selves with a condemned murderer on their hands and no one to hang him. They oftered to commute the sentence of any pris-oner who would act as executioner. Gonzales volunteered, and when the time came he did the hanging in the most improved fashion, thereby gaining his liberty He is still locked up on board the India and at a special meeting of the Emigration Commissioners, to be held to-morrow, they will decide whether he may land or not.

"Yes, sir; I have just been elected for the third term. That don't look as though my neighbors consider me the bad man Judge White did when he refused me a license?" "A man that can be elected to Councils three times must have considerable political nfluence," insinuated the reporter.
"I don't think so," replied Mr. Schad

"You're a reporter, maybe. Can you make your readers do as you say? That's the way often with a man who has been elected to Councils and his constitu-ents. It's all very silly. I could not help Mr. Shiras so much as all that." Contradicting the Court. "Has Mr. Shiras' political strength been weakened any in your ward because you were refused a license?" "I don't know. How could it? Mr. Shiras couldn't get my license pulled through. He did all he could, no doubt. He is not to be blamed."

"Judge White says you misrepresented things to him when an applicant last year, and tried the same thing this year." "That is not true. He has got the evidence I gave in his possession, and he ought to know. I have 17 rooms. A man who knows that made affidavit to that effect. I swore to it on the stand. ## MAYOR PEARSON MEANT IT, he Said that Allegheny Sales Keepers Obeyed the Law. A reporter of THE DISPATCH mention

Mayor Pearson, in Allegheny last night, what Judge White said in his Harrisburg interview about his (the Mayor's) statement that Allegheny saloon keepers had all obeyed the law. "What the Judge probably said to your correspondent," explained Mayor Pearson,

"was that I told him that. I wrote him no note. I did receive a letter from him in his official capacity before the License Court opened, asking me to furnish him with such information as I could, so that it would be useful to him in examining applicants. I had not answered this letter yet, when I accidentally met Judge White at the dinner hour at the St. Charles Hotel one day. He told me in a conversation that he intended to reduce the number of licenses very materially this year. I replied that as far as Allegheny City was concerned that I believed, with one or two exceptions, all the liquor dealers to whom he had granted licenses the previous year had tried to obey the laws.
"And I meant what I said," continued
the Mayor. "I knew that with but few ex-

Mr. Robb stated that he would raise the point of law that as long as a reputable wholesaler could give evidence of good moral character, and evinces a desire to conform to the law in every particular, that it is not within the discretionary power of any Judge to deny such a man a license.
On this ground Mr. Robb will ask the Supreme Court to quash the License Court proceedings so far as the bottlers are concerned, or else to give them another hear-ing. He said further that the other whole-salers are represented by lawyers and they will make a similar effort.

MAGNETIC METHODS

Are Being Purloined and Pirated by Jealous Rivals,

but success slips through the fingers of imitators. The public knows that it is the unapproachable and matchless opportunities presented by Kaufmanns' that causes their puny, self-asserted rivals to squirm, squeal and scowl. To demonstrate how futile it is for chagrined competitors to successfully emulate our methods we have just placed on sale the following unexampled two bargains:

Men's Fine Business

Don't confound this offer with the stereotyped phrase of "Suits for so much, worth so much," so frequentthe Pittsburg clothiers. There is no find these suits in fit being first-class.

FREE! FREE!

Elegant Hall Stands, Fully Five Feet High.

To make this special sale onethat will be long remembered by our patrons, we have concluded to give a beautiful Mahogany Hall Stand free with every purchase of one of the above $10 75 or $7 85 Suits. Our package wagon will deliver these hall stands free of charge at your residences, if desired.

BOYS! Don't think you've been left out in the cold. We
